Who is our neighbour?

In the era of the digital world, where social media is embraced by people of all generations, is it time to rethink and redefine as to “who our neighbour is” (Parable of the Good Samaritan - Luke 10: 25-37). While we see technology as a gift, we also need to acknowledge the great task for us that comes with it.

In 2011, Pope Benedict XVI expressed this concern in a message for the 45th World Communications Day: ‘The new technologies allow people to meet each other beyond the confines of space and of their own culture, creating in this way an entirely new world of potential friendships. This is a great opportunity, but it also requires greater attention to and awareness of possible risks. Who is my neighbour in this new world? Does the danger exist that we may be less present to those whom we encounter in our everyday life?’

The new digital environment reshapes the spatial and temporal dimensions of social life. In the world of digital activism, time and space have been reduced and social networking has raised new issues of identity, virtual relationships, superficiality, etc. These days we develop relationships with individuals through digital networks and form digital communities on social media. These are identified as positive social relationships; however, these will never replace the benefits of having face-to-face relationships. We need to constantly remember to never allow social networking to overrun our time, energy, and emotions that we lose sight of people that God has placed right next to us. Also, our relationship with our digital neighbour should be ethical, fair, kind, compassionate, etc.

Pope Francis is calling us to ‘boldly become citizens of the digital world’, with the image of the Good Samaritan as our inspiration. We are called not only to love our neighbour, but to bring the love of God to the new global neighbourhood.
